
A close-up photograph of a woodpecker carving in progress. The carving is made of light-colored wood and is positioned on a wooden workbench. A sharp knife is being used to carve the upper part of the bird's body. Wood shavings are scattered around the work area.

Tälj fram en näsa

A photograph of the woodpecker carving from a different angle. The bird's head is now more defined, showing a beak and a small eye. The lower part of the body is carved with vertical lines to represent a beard. The carving is surrounded by wood shavings on the workbench.
